Incorrect Product Properties in Product Specification Documents

Bug 2131570: This issue applied only to select product listings. When you downloaded the automatically generated product specification document for a product listing that had product properties with selected options, the document did not display the product properties correctly. The product properties with selections incorrectly displayed all possible options, which is the format for product properties without any selected options.

The screenshot displays the Deltek Specpoint interface. On the left, the 'Manage Listing' window shows a list of properties for a product. The 'PROPERTIES' section includes Durability (Grade 1, Grade 2, Grade 3), High-Profile Shape (Type I, Spanish or 'S', two-piece tapered mission, two-piece straight barrel mission, two-piece Greek, two-piece Roman), Low-Profile Shape (Type II, French interlocking), Flat Shape (Type III, flat shingle, flat interlocking), Finish and Texture (Matte, smooth, Matte, striated, Glazed, smooth), and Color (Terra cotta, Brown, Red, Blended red, Buff). Below this, three sections are expanded: 'High-Profile Shape' showing accessory tiles (Ridge, ridge vent, ridge end, hip and hip starter, header course, L-shaped rake edge, roll rake edge, starter, end band, terminal, eave closure, and top fixture units), 'Low-Profile Shape' showing accessory tiles (Ridge, ridge vent, ridge end, hip and hip starter, header course, L-shaped rake edge, roll rake edge, starter, end band, terminal, eave closure, and top fixture units), and 'Flat Shape' showing accessory tiles (Ridge and closed ridge end, hip and hip starter, header course, L-shaped rake edge, starter, end band, and terminal units). A 'MasterSpec option' tooltip is visible over the 'end band' option in the Low-Profile Shape section.

On the right, the generated specification document is shown. It includes a table of contents and a list of sections. The 'Basis-of-Design Product' section is highlighted. The document also includes a table of contents and a list of sections. The 'Basis-of-Design Product' section is highlighted. The document also includes a table of contents and a list of sections.
